URGES QUEBEC ACCEPT IMMIGRATION

MONTREAL—L'Action Catholique said that the Province of Quebec had for a long time frowned upon immigration. That could be understood, as French-Canadians had the impression—confirmed by facts—that immigration was being propagated as a means to keep French-Canadian influence within certain limits.

"But it isn't sure," the editorialist wrote, "that our systematic opposition has served our cause. It has not prevented immigrants from arriving here by hundreds of thousands, and has helped to drive into English-speaking centres subjects of Latin races which, with a little good-will on our part, could have been integrated into our French life."

L'Action Catholique declared it was time that French-Canadians changed their attitude towards immigration. Today, under actual conditions, French and English were on an equal footing regarding conditions of admission into Canada, and the organ of Catholic Action contended that Quebec should take steps to obtain a greater number of immigrants from France.

"We need," wrote the editorialist, "a substantial transfusion of French blood to add 'tone' to the many adverse influences which work against us. We need to be more positive in our attitude towards Canada's immigration policy. So long as we are content to be passive, if not actually opposed to immigration, how can we have any influence on the choice of those who are brought here to live amongst us?"

Attractive Bridal Held At St. Albert

ST. ALBERT—The St. Albert Roman Catholic church was the setting for an attractive bridal when Miss Germaine Gaulin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Gaulin of St. Albert became the bride of Mr. Jacques Vaugois, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Vaugois of Legal, on Wednesday, June 11 at 10 a.m. Rev. Father Labonte performed the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white nylon net with a bodice of French chantilly lace. Her gown featured a peplum of lace and light point sleeves. A long veil fell from a beaded hair headpiece and she carried a bouquet of white and pink carnations. She wore pearl earrings, gift of the groom.

Miss Pauline Vaugois and Miss Rose Marie St. Martin attended the bride. Little Cecile Vaugois was flower girl. The bridesmaids wore identical frocks of blue and pink respectively and carried colorful bouquets of pink and white carnations. The groom was attended by Marcel Potts and Paul Brodeur.

Mrs. G. E. Gaulin chose for her daughter's wedding a navy blue duster over a mauve flowered dress, a mauve straw hat and white accessories completed her ensemble. She wore red roses en corsage.

The mother of the groom wore a navy blue short nylon dress, a white and navy hat, and white accessories. Pinned at her shoulder was a corsage of red roses.

During the ceremony Miss Marie Coumbe sang Ave Maria and the choir sang Nunc Vespere on Beethoven's organ.

After the ceremony a dinner

A four tiered wedding cake flanked by slender lighted tapers in silver candelabra centred the brides table. ### Deep Sea Explorations

A few weeks ago the British research vessel, H.M.S. Challenger, dropped a weighted wire to a depth of almost seven miles in the Mariana Deep, about 200 miles southwest of Guam.

Exploring under the sea did not begin until the latter part of the eighteenth century. Early equipment used for measuring depths included a heavy weight and a line about half inch in diameter. Each time a measurement was desired, it took hours to lower and raise the weight.

The next method was of American origin: thin twine and a weight that detached itself when it hit bottom. The twine was followed by piano wire. In 1874, it was believed that an American ship set a speed record of measuring a five mile depth in two and a half hours.

Winding by hand was replaced by steam winding engines. The next development, echo-sounding, came about the time of the first World War. This process involved delicate instruments which measured the time that it takes sound echoed from the sea's bottom to reach the surface. By figuring the speed at which sound travels, depths can be determined.

Deep sea explorations have revealed that the Pacific is full of holes known as "deeps". A few examples are the Mindanao Deep (34,000 feet), the Tuscarora Deep (32,000 feet), the Kermadec Deep (31,000 feet), and the Solomon Deep (30,000 feet).

It has also been learned that many river channels, such as the Congo and the Indus, continue as deep canyons far into the ocean. Many such canyons have been found off the Atlantic Coast of the United States.

According to Dr. Hans Peterson, Director of the Oceanographic Institute of Goteborg, Sweden, in another billion years, new continents will appear in the middle of our present oceans. Dr. Peterson believes that the Atlantic Ocean will retain its well known S-shape, "but a new continent would appear along its whole length so that there would be two Atlantic seas."

Buying A Car In Britain

An example of the economic strain through which Great Britain is now passing was indicated recently when a spokesman of the British automobile industry asserted that British customers must wait five years for a new car from the date of order until delivery.

The reason this long wait is necessary, he explained, is that the bulk of production is now exported to earn much-needed foreign currency and goods. Therefore, the average British customer must wait several years before the small supply of new cars available in England provides him with a new vehicle.

Rationing and most of the war-time economic controls which were long ago discarded in Canada, are still necessary in England. The Conservatives, who came to power last October, have not removed these economic controls even though they are the party of private enterprise in Great Britain.

British citizens still get only a few ounces of meat a week, only small amounts of gasoline, at a high price, and even a limited supply of clothing, shoes and so forth. The average American, who can buy a new automobile or a new suit of clothes without any government interference, sometimes fails to appreciate the hard times which are still prevalent in Britain.

Though Canadian taxes are undoubtedly too high and though they should be reduced as soon as possible, it is nevertheless sobering to realize that the plight of the mother country is so severe, seven years after the end of World War II.

Note and Comment

Make soil conservation your business. The nations depend on the soil for food. Your livelihood depends on the soil. Conserve and utilize the straw and stubble as trash. Make soil conservation your business. Remember—trash on fields increases yields.

An Interesting Ride

Captain "Tug" Wilson, pilot of a commercial airliner which stops at Johannesburg, South Africa, recently experienced a ride he will not soon forget. As the pilot's plane reached flying speed and was leaving the airport, the radio operator noticed that a green snake was curling around the neck of the pilot.

The snake was none other than the dreaded mamba, a deadly African snake, and the radio operator, with the aid of another crewmember, managed to dislodge the snake, which coiled itself around the control column and struck at Radio Operator Rice, its fangs striking his collar. All the while, the pilot was scrambling to get back into the airport so that he could surrender his small enclosure to the mamba. From the control column, the snake fell on the instrument panel and then to the floor of the ship. It then vanished.

After the plane was landed, it was located and killed in a locker-room. The plane then took off again, with one less passenger, and much less excitement. It would probably be safe to say that the pilot will never experience a more devastating take-off and landing, and that he holds one sort of rare distinction in the annals of aviation having taken off with a rare African snake around his neck.

Why Editors Go Gray

When the local Baptist minister was leaving for a new charge, the congregation of a small Western Ontario town selected an ornamental mantel timepiece as a farewell gift.

To the horror of all concerned—the editor included—the local weekly reported the ceremony as being "climaxed by the presentation to the Reverend Clark of a handsome clock, which the recipient accepted with obvious delight and emotion."

Co-operative Farming

(From the Calgary Albertan)

Word out of Saskatchewan this week was that four co-operative farms in north-eastern Saskatchewan have folded up. It's easy to get a wrong impression from that.

The Saskatchewan government, with the co-operation and goodwill of such public organizations as the Canadian Legion and the farm associations, initiated co-operative farming ventures as a means of rehabilitating war veterans. On the whole the program has been a success. The four failures currently noted are due mostly to the unforeseeable difficulties arising before the farms had been solidly established.

There are two main objections to the ordinary type of individual farming on the prairies. One is that farm homes are too isolated for the women folk, and because of their isolation, lack the conveniences that seem to go with modern living. The other is that farming has become so mechanized that many individuals, especially those just starting out, cannot afford the expensive machinery that has to be used.

Co-operative farming was intended to get around these objections. The family homes are near together, in a little settlement so that all can enjoy better facilities such as roads, school, power, and so on. And the menfolk, by pooling their machinery and working it long hours, can farm better and cheaper than they could individually.

Most of the many successful co-operative farms now in existence in Saskatchewan divide the land among the members, so that each has something all his own. That is a concession to the individualism so strong among farmers. Still there are some sociological problems to be worked out. Can the members or partners work more or less together without getting on each other's nerves? The answer seems to be that they can. But the idea is not quite out of the experimental stage.

This is a radical departure in farm living. It is a worthwhile trial. On something like it depends the survival of at least a segment of prairie agriculture.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

Versatile Wife

"My wife's a wonder," said Mr. Hightbloom.
"Last winter she knitted me

tume, and this summer she knitted a bathing costume for herself
out of my old socks."

Good Answer

Fly Control on the Farm

The most common farm flies are House flies, Stable flies and Horn flies. They reproduce very rapidly, breeding in all kinds of decayed material and filth. There seems to be no way of getting completely rid of these pests, but the practices recommended here will, if followed,
keep them down to an insignificant number. To be effective, any fly control campaign must include (1)
proper steps in sanitation, and (2)
the wise use of chemicals.

Sanitation. Good sanitation is the backbone of fly control. Without it,
you cannot control flies effectively,
regardless of the chemical or chemicals you use. Sanitation includes destroying garbage; cleaning barnyard scrapings then right down to hard ground; cleaning out hog pens,
lean houses and open cattle sheds;
raking up and burning weeds and other farmyard refuse; treating outdoor privies with borax every day,
and hauling out fresh stable manure
to the field every day or two. A lot of work, yes, but necessary for best fly control results.

Chemicals. To control flies around the house, spray porches and doorways with Lindane or Chlor丹.
DDT will give satisfactory control
where light infestations of house flies occur. As a spray for the dairy barn, use Lindane or Methoxychlor. For other buildings Chlor丹 may be used instead of Lindane. Treat all places where flies roost, and repeat the applications every 3 to 5 weeks.
Avoid contamination of feed and water with Lindane and Chlor丹.
Concerning cattle sprays, Methoxychlor is recommended for dairy cattle.
It can also be used on beef cattle that are within 60 days of market.
If the cattle will not be marketed
for more than 60 days, then a DDT spray is recommended. No matter what chemical you use be sure and follow the directions and precautions
of the manufacturer.

• Farm fly control pays. It safeguards health, increases milk and meat production, from livestock, and adds to the comfort of farm living.

Sounds Right

"The teacher was giving a lesson
on the seasons. She asked,
"Frankie, why does your father put up the storm window in the fall

"The main reason is that my mother keeps after him until he does."

Generous Husband

"I believe my husband is the most generous man on earth."

"How's that?"

"Well, I gave him a dozen of the lowest test for Christmas, and he took them right down and gave them to the Salvation Army."

LETTERS TO LOUISA

Dear Louisa,
I am a widow, thirty years old,
and have a little girl of five. Since my husband died, I have been working as a stenographer and my mother takes care of my daughter. I live with my parents.
I met a man that I have fallen in love with about six months ago

and he has asked me to marry him. But he suggested one thing that shocked me and I feel that I must give him up. He wants me to leave my daughter with her grandparents and the two of us have a home of our own.
What do you think of such an attitude?

Answer:
I think that this man's love for you is a selfish one. If he truly loved you, he would understand that his mother could be happy to give up her child to someone else.
He would try to be a real father
to this little girl, who has lost her own father for he would know that by doing so, he would be making the woman he professes to love, very happy.

He is probably a bit jealous too,
and is not mature enough to understand that the love of a husband and the love of one's child
there is room for both in any good woman's heart.

Unless he changes in this feeling of possession, I think you would be wise in giving him up.
Try to throw the two of them together as much as possible, for most little girls are quite attractive and if he has never been around children very much, he may not know what joy they bring to a home.

In your case, you have your parents near to help when you have engagements in the evening
but duty to a child comes before acquiring a new husband.

Louisa.

Do Not Probe To Remove Insect

Pinnies and days out of doors sometimes result in a child with an insect in the ear. This can be serious if not removed at once. A drop or two of olive oil may float
it out, but probing is dangerous.
I A more simple remedy is to attract the insect by holding a flashlight near the ear.

He that hears much and speaks
not at all shall be welcome both in bower and hall. —John Ray

One day, when a nearby creek

I thought was one of my girl

Last fall during duck hunting

CHARTERED BANKS HAIL RETURN "NORMAL, COMPETITIVE, BANKING"

MONTEBELLO, Que. — L. G. Gillett, President of The Canadian Bankers' Association, declared here today the chartered banks "welcome a return to normal competitive banking" with the lifting of bank credit restrictions by the Bank of Canada a month ago.

In his address to the annual meeting of the Association, he noted that restrictions on both consumer credit and bank credit had been lifted in recent weeks. Both were "welcome steps, as they indicated a belief that inflation has been brought under some measure of control in Canada."

"I am sure I am speaking for the whole business community in saying that, just as everyone was prepared to co-operate speedily and completely with the government in its anti-inflation program, we welcome removal of restrictions and impediments to ordinary business practice as they become unnecessary or inadvisable."

"In applying the bank credit restrictions, the banks sought to further the national interest and now we welcome removal of restrictive competitive banking, so long as an integral part of Canadian life. If the policy contributed to the lessening of inflationary pressures in Canada and helped to preserve the purchasing power of the consumer's dollar, the banks are content and amply repaid for the difficulties and inconveniences involved."

"From all this, it should not be gathered that all danger from inflation has been left behind. Far from it, but I will say this much we have beaten off its initial threat and stand better prepared for whatever the future may hold."

Mr. Gillett saw prospects for Canadian business over the next four months "quite cloudy" but he believed that still active inflationary pressures would tend, at least temporarily, to be kept in "uneasy balance" by the opposing forces of deflation which had shown some signs of developing.

Mr. Gillett reserved judgment on the estimate of some observers that the decline in numerous raw material prices pointed to "an end of inflation and even a decline in business everywhere." Conceding that "they may well be right," he suggested that accelerated defence spending might offset the slackened demand for the products of some industries.

With inflation stayed off, at least temporarily, and tremendous plans afoot for private capital investment in the next few years, Mr. Gillett asserted Canadians had "every cause for confidence over the long pull." He cited figures of the investment programs, running into hundreds of millions of dollars, planned for the mining, pulp and paper, electrical, chemical, aluminium, oil and other industries, and commented:

"These figures of future capital investment are merely scattered examples of what lies ahead in Canadian development. They illustrate the basic fact that Canada has the greatest accumulation of undeveloped natural resources in the world and that Canada is on the threshold of spectacular progress and development, the opening of a dynamic era."

The Association head emphasized that it had been private enterprise that had "built Canada to its present dimensions and is laying plans for such marked development in the immediate future."

"It is the spirit of enterprise that is on the march in Canada today," he continued. "So much so, that it sets Canada apart from almost all other nations. It has given Canadians the second highest standard of living in the world and permitted this country of only 14 million people to do more, and in a shorter time, than any comparable nation."

"Our progress has been based on work, thrift, investment and enterprise, and if we hold to those principles—and are given peace—our future progress is assured."

Mr. Gillett took the occasion of the meeting to raise the question of how much longer it would be possible to avoid an increase in the rates of interest on bank lending in the face of substantial rises in the costs of doing business. In this regard he said:

"We all know that unlike other countries, there has been no general increase in banking interest rates in Canada for many years, but in the face of steadily rising costs, we do not know how long this can continue."

Pointing out that the total of three items of banking cost—staff salaries, taxes and interest on savings deposits—had more than doubled between 1944 and 1951, he commented:

"In most businesses, when costs go up, selling prices follow, but that has not been true recently of interest rates in Canada. Lending rates have gone up in the United States, in Britain and in several other countries. We have tried to keep them from going up in Canada but, frankly, I do not know how much longer we can succeed."

In this connection Mr. Gillett emphasized that, contrary to opinions sometimes entertained, returns to bank stockholders were not high. "Unclear and ambiguous" estimates of 14 per cent and 16 per cent dividends were calculated on the nominal par value of shares. Actually, 1951 statistics showed an "exceedingly modest return" averaging between 4½ and 4¾ per cent in shareholders' equity investment, including the premium paid to buy most bank stock and the profits put back in the business as rest or reserve funds.

Mr. Gillett pointed also, to the tremendous expansion of staff and operating facilities which the banks had had to undertake, in order to keep abreast of the demands for banking service from an increasing population, an expanding economy and newly developed areas of settlement. In the past 10 years, the number of chartered bank employees had increased by over 61 per cent, and the number of banking offices had increased by 486 to a total of 3,776 branches and sub-branches. In the same period, Mr. Gillett noted average salary rates had been raised on a scale comparing favorably with the levels prevailing in similar fields, and early this year the banks had initiated the five-day week in selected branches to attract and retain a high calibre of employees. This had been necessitated, he said, because "we were losing trained, competent and well-paid employees to other institutions that were closed on Saturdays."

"We are grateful to the banking public for its acceptance of this innovation in Canada," Mr. Gillett added. "We have tried to minimize inconvenience to our customers by providing extra banking hours on Fridays in most of the branches closing Saturdays, particularly for making deposits and cashing pay cheques. I take this opportunity to acknowledge the splendid co-operation of bank customers in this attempt to benefit the working conditions of bank staffs."

Mr. Gillett reported that despite considerable publicity about bank hold-ups, there were fewer last year than in 1950 and there had been 45 convictions for bank robbery across Canada on top of 44 in the preceding year. Since January 1, 1950, the banks had paid out a total of $114,295 in rewards to citizens who had aided in apprehension of bank robbers, to police forces in recognition of outstanding efforts by their members, and in gratuities to widows of police officers and citizens killed in attempts to apprehend bank robbers.
